Methodology

The World Wealthiest Cities Report 2025 is published by Henley & Partners, the global leader in residence and citizenship by investment, in partnership with global wealth intelligence firm New World Wealth, which is currently the only known independent wealth research firm systematically tracking global wealth migration trends between countries and cities.

New World Wealth's exclusive wealth migration data and Henley & Partners' pioneering intelligence on investment migration trends offer unparalleled insights into the global movements and preferences of high-net-worth individuals and their families. With over a decade of research, both firms provide a unique perspective on the intersection of wealth and mobility.

New World Wealth: Tracking millionaires on the move

New World Wealth tracks the movements of over 150,000 high-net-worth individuals in its in-house database, with a special focus on those with over USD 100 million in listed company holdings. The database's primary focus is on entrepreneurs and company founders (50%+ of the database) and individuals from high-value companies who hold the following positions: chairperson, CEO, president, director, and managing partner.

The firm uses various public sources to check city locations, including LinkedIn and other business portals. Its stats are therefore mainly based on the work locations of the individuals. New World Wealth's data also takes into account prime property statistics — specifically, it considers the number of highly priced homes in each area.

Note: It should be noted that New World Wealth never gives out the names of the individuals in its database, which it uses purely for in-house statistical studies.

Henley & Partners: Investment migration intelligence

Henley & Partners has more than 25 years of institutional experience. Our extensive data on investment migration trends is drawn from advising clients from over 100 different nationalities and engaging with enquiries from more than 200 nationalities worldwide. We track the number, nationalities, and locations of wealthy individuals who enquire about and apply for investment migration programs, whether or not they ultimately relocate, as well as trends in program demand and investment, offering unique insights into the motivations and preferences of those seeking additional residence or citizenship options.

Note: For research purposes, Henley & Partners only uses anonymized statistics and never discloses the personal details of the individuals in its database.
