Global Wealth Mobility Leaders 2026

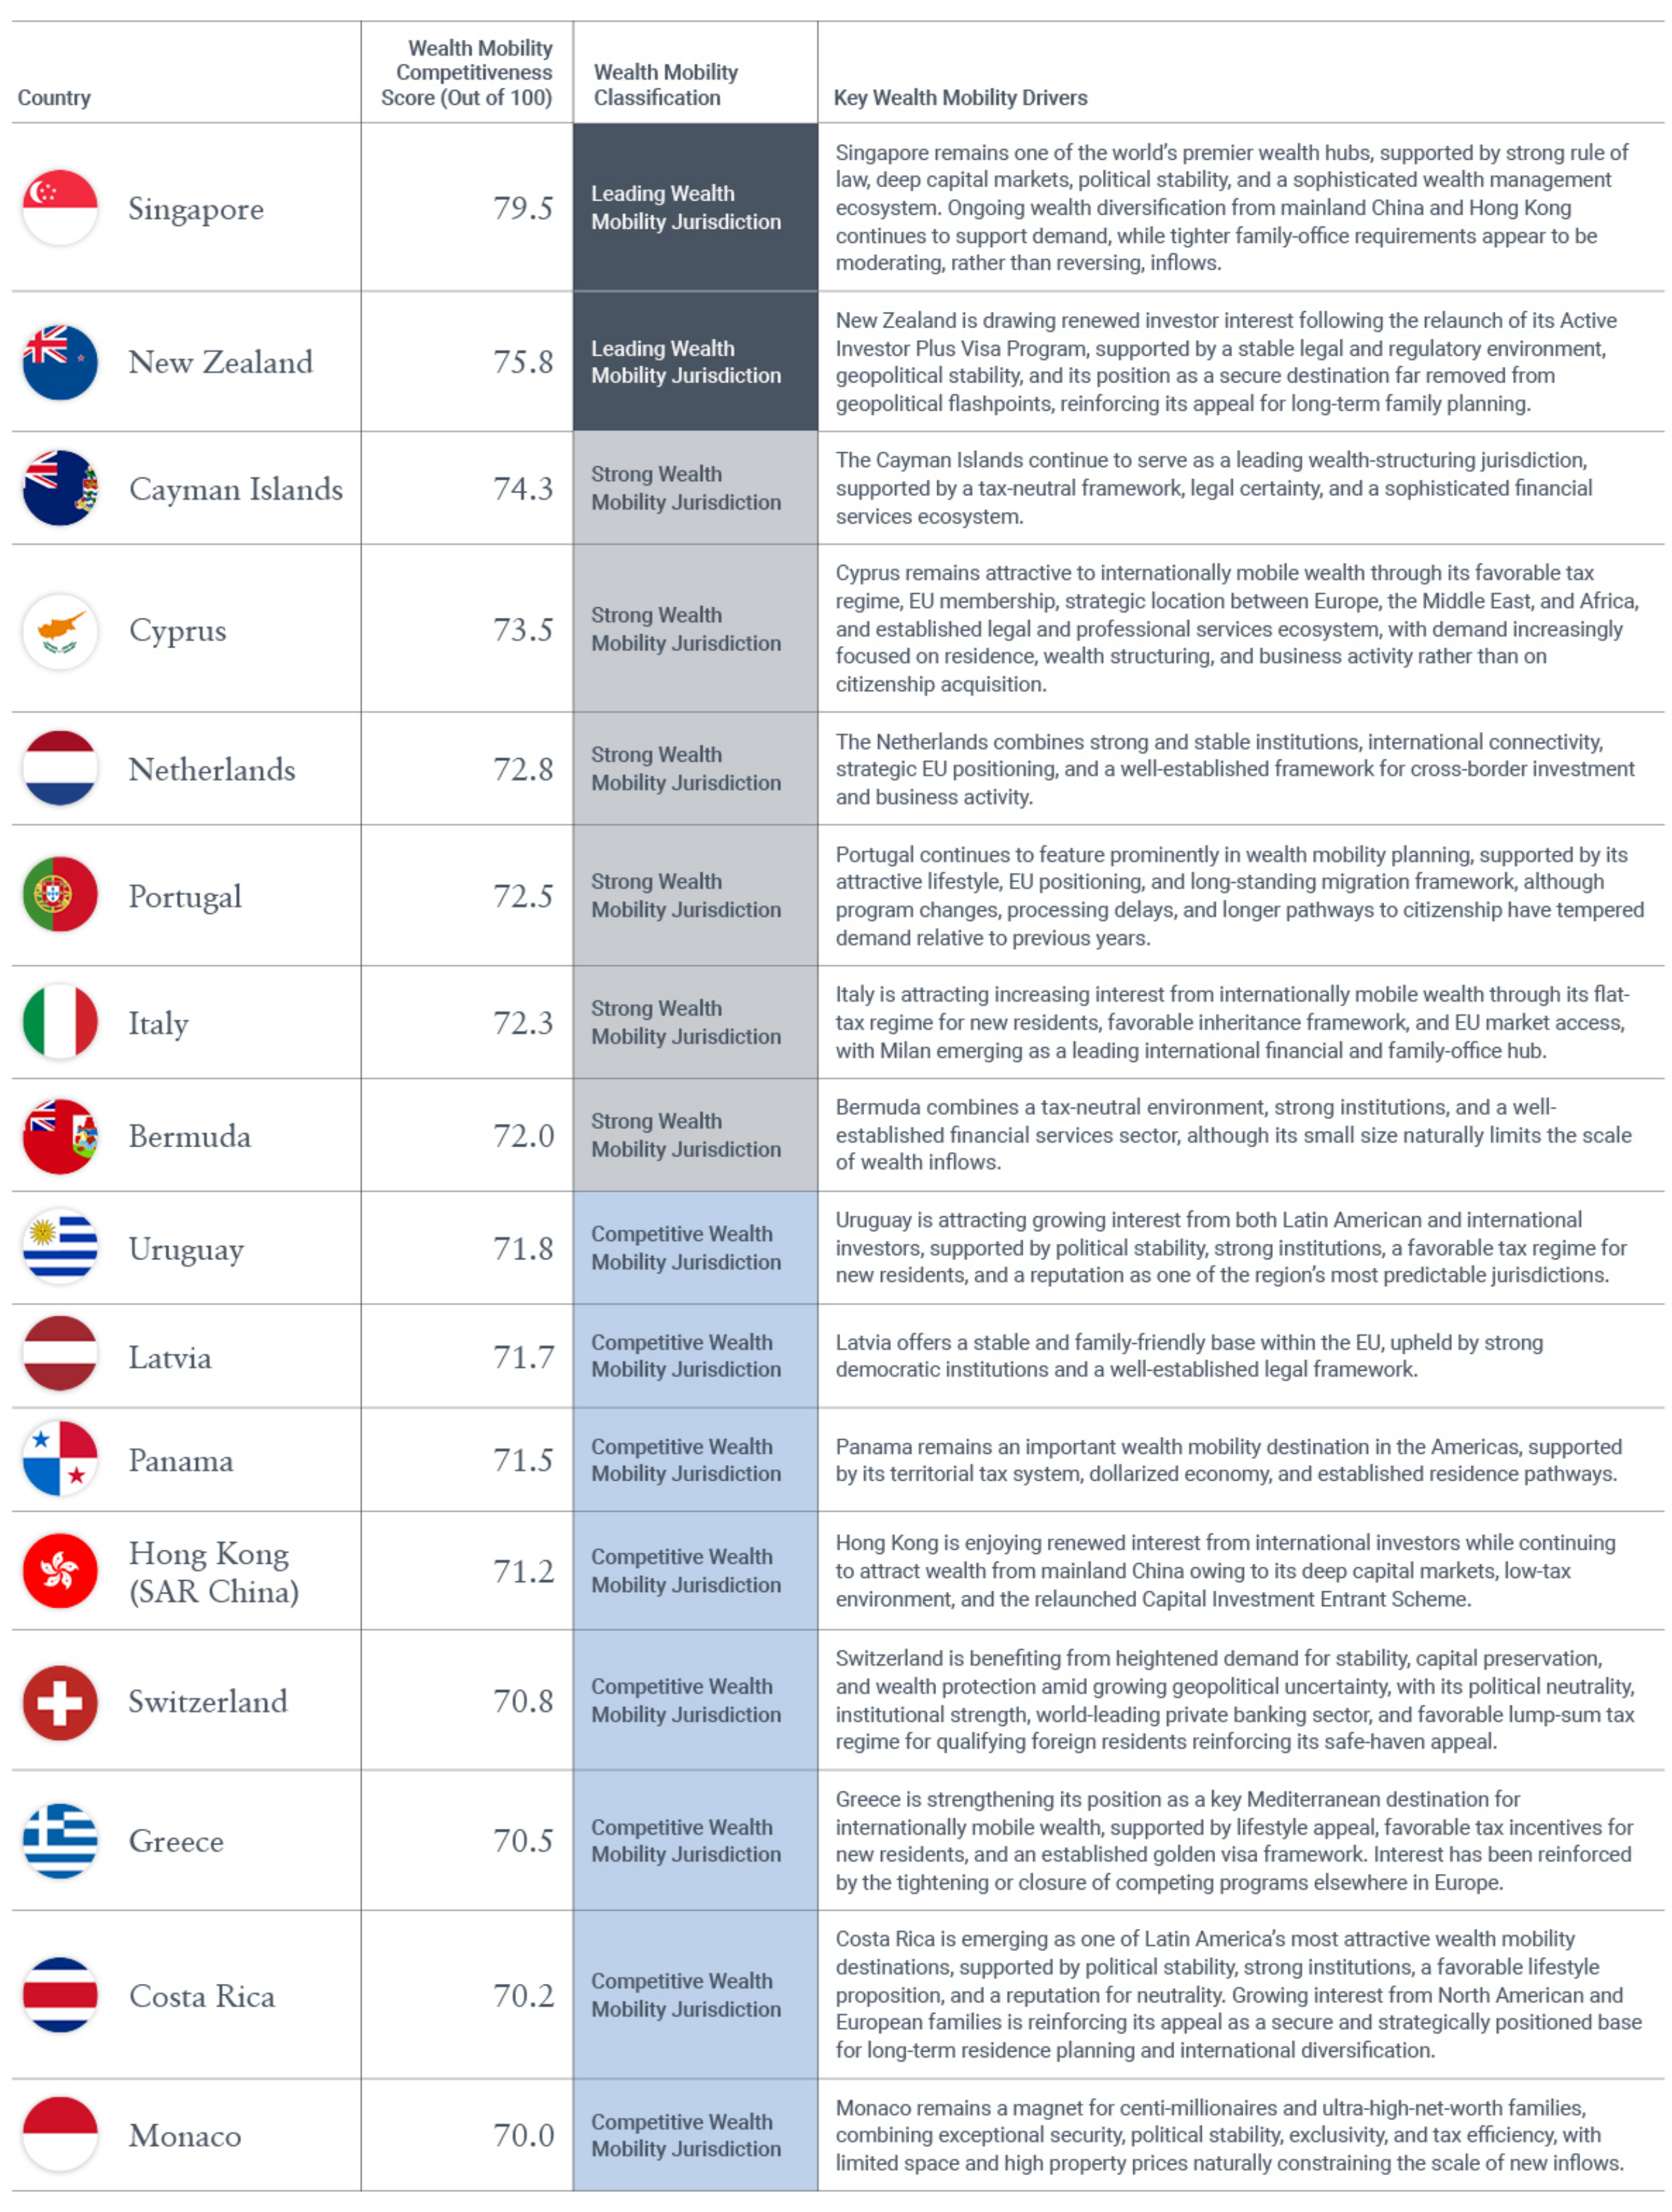
DATA

Jurisdictions demonstrating particularly strong structural positioning for globally mobile wealth, based on a combination of policy competitiveness, investor access, institutional quality, resilience, and international optionality.

This table highlights selected jurisdictions identified as leaders within the broader wealth mobility landscape.

Selection is informed by the Global Wealth Mobility Framework together with Henley & Partners' proprietary client enquiry and application trends across more than 100 nationalities, as well as intelligence and insights gathered through the firm's extensive global network of private banks, wealth managers, family offices, tax advisors, legal practitioners, intermediaries, and government partners.

As a result, inclusion reflects a combination of structural competitiveness, market relevance, investor demand, and observed wealth mobility trends. It should not be interpreted as a ranking of the highest-scoring jurisdictions or as a measure of actual millionaire inflows or outflows.



Country	Wealth Mobility Competitiveness Score (Out of 100)	Wealth Mobility Classification	Key Wealth Mobility Drivers
Singapore	79.5	Leading Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Singapore remains one of the world's premier wealth hubs, supported by strong rule of law, deep capital markets, political stability, and a sophisticated wealth management ecosystem. Ongoing wealth diversification from mainland China and Hong Kong continues to support demand, while tighter family-office requirements appear to be moderating, rather than reversing, inflows.
New Zealand	75.8	Leading Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	New Zealand is drawing renewed investor interest following the relaunch of its Active Investor Plus Visa Program, supported by a stable legal and regulatory environment, geopolitical stability, and its position as a secure destination far removed from geopolitical flashpoints, reinforcing its appeal for long-term family planning.
Cayman Islands	74.3	Strong Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	The Cayman Islands continue to serve as a leading wealth-structuring jurisdiction, supported by a tax-neutral framework, legal certainty, and a sophisticated financial services ecosystem.
Cyprus	73.5	Strong Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Cyprus remains attractive to internationally mobile wealth through its favorable tax regime, EU membership, strategic location between Europe, the Middle East, and Africa, and established legal and professional services ecosystem, with demand increasingly focused on residence, wealth structuring, and business activity rather than on citizenship acquisition.
Netherlands	72.8	Strong Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	The Netherlands combines strong and stable institutions, international connectivity, strategic EU positioning, and a well-established framework for cross-border investment and business activity.
Portugal	72.5	Strong Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Portugal continues to feature prominently in wealth mobility planning, supported by its attractive lifestyle, EU positioning, and long-standing migration framework, although program changes, processing delays, and longer pathways to citizenship have tempered demand relative to previous years.
Italy	72.3	Strong Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Italy is attracting increasing interest from internationally mobile wealth through its flat-tax regime for new residents, favorable inheritance framework, and EU market access, with Milan emerging as a leading international financial and family-office hub.
Bermuda	72.0	Strong Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Bermuda combines a tax-neutral environment, strong institutions, and a well-established financial services sector, although its small size naturally limits the scale of wealth inflows.
Uruguay	71.8	Competitive Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Uruguay is attracting growing interest from both Latin American and international investors, supported by political stability, strong institutions, a favorable tax regime for new residents, and a reputation as one of the region's most predictable jurisdictions.
Latvia	71.7	Competitive Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Latvia offers a stable and family-friendly base within the EU, upheld by strong democratic institutions and a well-established legal framework.
Panama	71.5	Competitive Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Panama remains an important wealth mobility destination in the Americas, supported by its territorial tax system, dollarized economy, and established residence pathways.
Hong Kong (SAR China)	71.2	Competitive Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Hong Kong is enjoying renewed interest from international investors while continuing to attract wealth from mainland China owing to its deep capital markets, low-tax environment, and the relaunched Capital Investment Entrant Scheme.
Switzerland	70.8	Competitive Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Switzerland is benefiting from heightened demand for stability, capital preservation, and wealth protection amid growing geopolitical uncertainty, with its political neutrality, institutional strength, world-leading private banking sector, and favorable lump-sum tax regime for qualifying foreign residents reinforcing its safe-haven appeal.
Greece	70.5	Competitive Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Greece is strengthening its position as a key Mediterranean destination for internationally mobile wealth, supported by lifestyle appeal, favorable tax incentives for new residents, and an established golden visa framework. Interest has been reinforced by the tightening or closure of competing programs elsewhere in Europe.
Costa Rica	70.2	Competitive Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Costa Rica is emerging as one of Latin America's most attractive wealth mobility destinations, supported by political stability, strong institutions, a favorable lifestyle proposition, and a reputation for neutrality. Growing interest from North American and European families is reinforcing its appeal as a secure and strategically positioned base for long-term residence planning and international diversification.
Monaco	70.0	Competitive Wealth Mobility Jurisdiction	Monaco remains a magnet for centi-millionaires and ultra-high-net-worth families, combining exceptional security, political stability, exclusivity, and tax efficiency, with limited space and high property prices naturally constraining the scale of new inflows.

Disclaimer

The Wealth Mobility Competitiveness Scores reflect the relative competitiveness of jurisdictions for globally mobile wealth within the 2026 Global Wealth Mobility Framework. They are directional indicators only and do not measure actual millionaire inflows or outflows, nor should they be interpreted as migration forecasts, a global ranking, or a wealth mobility index.

The Wealth Mobility Classifications are intended to provide context and interpretation rather than establish a league table of jurisdictions. They are informed by the Wealth Mobility Competitiveness Score together with broader qualitative considerations, including investor access, policy developments, geopolitical conditions, market relevance, and observed wealth mobility trends.
