As mentioned before, it should be noted that private sector employees in Greece, are entitled to 14 wages. This is also the case (as far as my google search), in Spain and Portugal at least. This should be captured at the salary inputs, otherwise the salary is underestimated (as it appears to be).

GiorgosTh on Sep 21, 2025:

The salary of a new entrant to the job after taxes starts at €760 and can increase depending on qualifications. It is not common to see a net salary of a new entrant over €1,200. It should also be clarified that those who work in the private sector receive 14 salaries per year (two extras), while those who work in the public sector (about 600,000 employees) receive 12 salaries. In recent years, high prices and inflation have put a lot of pressure on the standard of living. In practice, this means for the majority of the population that in order to make ends meet, you have to spend a lot of time looking for offers for cheaper prices everywhere: in house rentals (the housing crisis due to overtourism is very intense and if you don't have your own home, things are difficult), in electricity and energy (where the price fluctuates each month depending on supply and demand), in gasoline (one of the most expensive in Europe due to the high taxes imposed by the government), in supermarkets, etc. Something else that also negatively affects the standard of living is the decline in public benefits from the state (public health, public education, security - police, etc.). This fact turns you towards the private sector and if you find yourself in need (e.g. health) you will have to pay for these goods.

Athens is an eyesore to Greece. It's true the Greek government has turned their backs on the younger generation who cannot find suitable employment that actually pays a wage acceptable to their careers. Look around Athens it's filled with hate graphiti visit Athens it's all there.Violent protests happens often throughout Athens. Basically Greece is broke for just one reason politicians are lining their pockets is how it really is.

Anonymous on Apr 01, 2024:

14 salaries in Greece with minimum gross amount as of 1st of April: 968 Euros.
Of course not ideal based on the costs, but salaries (based on 12 months) are higher to what people mention below. High educated people , who live abroad for more than 7 years, have a 50 % tax free of salary benefit.

stelios on Nov 06, 2023:

A lot of figures are outdated. Electricity alone is more expensive than the overall given for bills. Rents for decent equipped studios start from 650, the current values are a joke.

Average Monthly Net Salary is at best 800

George on Oct 10, 2023:

I understand that you cant be right with prices..All over Greece all products etc comes up every week!We have the most expensive gas,electricity on all Europe (with much lower salaries)..You just cant live here anymore..One man monthly cost with a small rent, car and basics are almost 1000€ and most salay are 800€

I agree with Christos
Average wage in Greece is €1176 which is 1092 after tax for 2023. Greeks are famous for crying about their financial situation because we are a low-trust society. Both my parents make 2.5 times more than the average wage and still cry.

Just see the minimum wages in Europe. Greece's minimum wage is 910 gross as of April 2023

I must agree with the post about Greeks dumpster diving.I saw the same thing passing through Athens last month.

Thanos Panagiotopoulos on Feb 13, 2023:

TO ZINA
It's all correct, it's really hard to get by in Athens with a regular job, at current regular costs.

Thanos Panagiotopoulos on Feb 13, 2023:

The statistics pie of the expenses does not represent the actual situation, it is micalculated IMO and needs to be corrected. You cannot present an average of 19.6% of expenses for rent with an average rent at 491 euros for a single bedroom,when at the same time the average salary after tax is 909 Euros. Maybe it's presented this way because most people cannot afford to live by themselves and share an apartment. Even if you examine the 3bedroom apartments at 856 euros, then it's 285 euros per person, which leads at a 32% on average as an expense per person...not 19.6. Maybe, this could be the case. But still,it's misleading IMO.

That's very old news besides Macedonians has had far more intense encounters with Greeks than turks ever did.Greeks don't really mean anything to other countries just like Greeks don't Turks don't just like turkey doesn't either.That tells you I'm neither Greek or Macedonian so I'm not biased.

FOR EVERYONE THAT READS THESE COMMENTS

For the last 25 years the relationship between Turks and Greeks is escalating to the worst. Turks are threatening, Greeks stand their ground. As I see here, there are many turk trolls trying to damage our country reputation.

You, objective reader: keep that in mind.

Missconceptions on Dec 28, 2022:

Now I will address some misconceptions

Tourism is very important in Greece where 1/6th of the population works in a seasonal basis but it's not our biggest source of income. Greece's biggest source of income is processed petroleum and shipping, in fact Greece is #1 in the shipping sector. The other bigger companies are our banks who have many subsidiaries over the Balkans. And our electricity providers that now thanks to the energy crisis worth billions.

I wrote bellow that you should not come to Greece if you want to work 9 to 5, well if you are working in the electricity/power plant sector or renewable energies, then you will make lots of cash.

Now, another misconception is "if the average wage is 1050 euros and average rent is 400 euros how do people get by", the answer is that Greece is within top 10 countries of home ownership, about 75% of Greeks own their house, and good chance is if you are in the remaining 25% you are probably crushing at your parents home lol.

Also we have a housing crisis ongoing, due to said homeowners refusing to rent their houses and instead putting them up for AirBNB usage, which has skyrocketed the rent costs, fun fun...

My critique of Athens on Dec 28, 2022:

To get this straight, for all foreigners puzzled, the average gross salary in Greece stands at 1355 euros a month, which turns into 1050 euros a month after taxes are paid (net salary) this is the equivalent of 1977 American dollars (Purchasing Power Parity) with the current exchange rate (29/Dec/2022).

Now salaries wary depend on the sector you work at, I would say that with 0 years of experience, expect to get paid around €760/month salary without a college degree, unless you are self-employed and work with commissions, my friend who is into the insurance sector 5 years now, makes ~€1800/month. With a college degree wages go up to €1500/month with 0 years of experience. My college educated parents (PhD) make around €2500/month after decades of experience, I make €800/month (I am an under-graduate).

These wages were more than enough to get by, but due to the recent inflation crisis, I struggle to get by with my bills on time. I also own my own two bedroom apartment, so I am better off that people of my age.

For everyone thinking about moving to Greece, you have to assess your situation, if you are self-employed, work from home or a retiree, then Greece will be a paradise for you, this is a Mediterranean country with a warm weather, no need for heating 10 out of the 12 months of the year and we are very customer friendly, you can order food from supermarkets or restaurants via online delivery often provided in English as well. Sklavenitis and Vasilopoulos do groceries deliveries and there are many food delivery companies such as efood, box, wolt, deliveras and so on.

52% of the Greek population speaks English at a conversational level and the vast majority of Greeks under 35 are very fluent in English, only behind Cyprus and Scandinavian countries. Additionally many places from museums to theatres are in English, as well as all traffic signs and so on.

BUT, if you are an employee working 9 to 5 at your average day job and just want to move to Greece because it has "cool history" and sunny weather, this country will be your nightmare, you will struggle to find a day job as a foreigner with our current 12% unemployment rate (which ironically is a historically low since the 2000s), the selfish attitude of Greeks will ruin your day, the traffic is a disaster, crime and safety is really mediocre, more on par with America than any western European country. There is little to no green to be found in the dystopian cement-favela called Athens, unless you move in well-off suburbs, but remember that the traffic sucks and will take away hours from your life, public transportation although much better than any US city outside New York maybe, is really inferior to most European capitals. There are constant delays and a yolo and 0 f's given attitude in this country.

And this is why I consider moving to western Europe once I graduate :) as hundreds of thousand of young Greeks have done.
This country really tests your nerves if you are a family man trying to get by on your daily life. Great place if you are self-employed or a retiree though.

This is my input on Greece, again I would also recommend staying away from Athens if you are here for a 9 to 5 job, go to a smaller city, your kids will thank you forever.

What you read is correct 700€ without rent is correct.People are only surviving due to living with family members but even then it's a stretch.You should rethink your plans of moving to Greece you will be greatly disappointed guaranteed.

Athens is broke just like all of Greece is and it shows.A tiny country full of conartists,lowlifes,theives,nobodiesis what Greeks are.Now that the scamdemic,is winding down few if any tourists are returning and there won't be either. Greece depended heavily upon American tourists 95% of the time,this is true and they have for many years.

But Greeks burned their bridges with Americans and Europeans from other countries in Europe many times but now the party is over permanently. Very few Europeans visit Greece for obvious reasons,bad karma breeds bad karma throughout Greece.Greeks are arrogant and self serving.

Greeks aren't worthy to even breathe air.

Also don't listen to the anonymous (Turkish) comments about the Muslims and Syrians and all these refugees. They are contained and will soon be shipped out to their destination.

Anonymous on Mar 21, 2021:

The third wave of covid19 has saturated France Germany Italy and Greece. On average just in Germany 20,000 infections per day. Since Greece depends heavily upon tourism it'll affect Greece longterm. The EU mentioned last week taxes on retirement pensions plus other assets may be taxed at 17% more than normal to offset the impact of covid19. This isn't good news for some especially people who depend solely upon retirement pensions. But it could affect other assets being the same tax rate. We're leaving Greece in several days before the new tax rates kick in going back to the UK where there isn't such drastic measures.If foreigners own businesses the 17% tax rate will apply to that as well. Hopefully the pandemic will end soon and people can get back to somewhat normalcy.

Cheers
